LONDON, — Dec. 29.

A chapter of the most illustrious order of St.

Patrick is to be held, at the castle of Dublin, on the 17th of March next, by a particular order from his Majelty.

We hear it is determined on, in the new lawarrangement, that Mr Scott and Mr Bearcroft shall be Attorney and Solicitor General, in the room of Mr Pepper Arden and Mr Bearcroft, pro-

Wednesday morning Mr Pitt, in company with Mr Grenville, set out for the university of Cambridge, where they propose spending a few days.

It is said that Mr Eden received great affiftance from Dean Tucker in his negociation of the late commercial treaty between this country and France.

The commercial treaty is faid to be the great object which has brought over the Hutchisons from Ireland; the several articles of which are to be fairly discussed between them and the minister, and a candid final arrangement made, for the joint intereells of both kingdoms, prior to the meeting of the English and Irish Parliaments, on whose decision the treaty of commerce must ultimately stand or portance of the object gives it the air of truth.

When the intended regulation for abolishing the rank of Major in the army takes place, a military correspondent recommends the abolition also of the the pay and doing the duty of Lieutenant, and at the fame time holding the nominal rank of Captain, is an abfurdity repugnant to the general confidency of a military establishment.

Lewes, Dec. 25. So effectually was the battery at Brighthelmstone undermined by the sea, that when it fell, more than a foot in thickness of the main rock came away cemented to the foundation of the brickwork.

The means which have been used fince the last fpring tides, for the prefervation of the houses that have of late been so threatened by the inroads of the sea at Brighthelmstone, we are glad to hear, are likely to prove effectual.

Last week the body of the unfortunate Mrs Giles was found, very much disfigured, on the beach, between Newhaven and Seaford. Her remains were carried to Newhaven, and decently interred in the church-yard there, by the side of her husband, at the expence of Mr Hurdis, and the Rev. Mr Evans of Seaford.

Last Tuesday, one Richard Scipio Bristow was committed to Fiorsham goal, by Samuel Blunt, Esq; being charged before him, on oath, with robbing Mr Rich. Hards, a farmer, on Staplefield Common, near Cuckfield, of two guineas and a half, in his own house, in the following very fingular and daring manner: — The prisoner, about fix o'clock in the evening of the preceding Saturday, went boldly into Mr Hards' kitchen, where nimies, wife, and three servants, (two men and a boy) were litting, and after accolling the farmer with great familiarity, by faying, "Ah! Mr Hards! how do you do? You are the very man I wanted to fee," clapped a cocked piftol to his breaft, and demanded two guineas and a half; when Mr Hards being greatly alarmed at fuch a fudden and desperate attack, offered him all the money he had in his pockets, about seventeen shillings; but this the robber refused, adding, he knew there was more money in the house, and that he must have the sum he had before mentioned; when Mr Hards went up stairs, and brought it down, which the villain received with as much composure, and as little interruption, in the presence of two flour ploughmen, as if it was his just and legal claim, and afterwards very modefly begged a pint of beer, which he drank; and having told Mr Hards, that if matters turned out to his expectation, he would shortly repay him, and leave the money for him with Mr Knowles, of Hand-Cross, he went leifurely away. He was apprehended through the means of Mr Waller, attorney, at Cuckfield, who, on his return home from Worme on Monday, hearing the robbery spoken of at Crawley, said he had not long before passed a man on the road, with a bludgeon in his hand, exactly answering the description of the robbet, when fome perfons immediately went in purfuit of him, and took him at the Duke' Head, at Copthorne. He was the next day examin-ed, when he confessed the fact, and was fully com-mitted as above, to take his trial at our next assizes for the offence.

Ministers have received advices from Mr Faul-Ministers have received advices from Mr Faulkener at Lisbon, in which he informe them, that he evidently perceives a backwardness on the part of that Court to forward the negociation.—On his arrival the Minister either actually was, or pretended to be, ifflicted with the gour in his head, and confequently declared that he was utterly incapable of attending to busness. In short, Mr Faulkener sees, that they are determined to protract the negociation till they sees what the English Parliament shall do with the French treaty. with the French treaty.

That our papers are more ready to circulate reports, than judicious in chooling them, may be easily afcertain from reading the many paragraphs respecting the ceffion of the two Floridas by Spain to the king of France.—So far from his most Catholic Majesty's exerctaining a thought of that kind, that he is now bistowing much pains and cost to put them on the most respectable footing: and all possible attention is pail to prevent altercation with the American States.

The Emperor remarking the depravity of morals which prevail famong his Tubjects, by which the model women throughout his dominions are daily exposed to asronts and even violence, after mature deliberation aid conviction, has writ to the Tribustic his Chincery, requiring their advice and associated the conviction of the chincery, requiring their advice and associated the chincery, requiring their advice and associated the chincery. nal of his Chincery, requiring their advice and af-fiftance in a plan, calculated to redrefs this public grievance. He recommends to their confideration, whether it would not be proper to affign and licenfe four houses of public refort, and on this being put into effect, whether it would not, in some measure,

Some go fo far as to affirm, that the Emperor has adjusted the plan, and that the Covent of St Laurence is fixed upon for the head quarter of profitution. If this should be a fact, the Emperor only imitates the conduct of Lewis IX. of France, afterwards canonized by the Church of Rome, who was the first monarch that licensed such houses in Paris.

Their High Mightinesses having charged their Ambassadors at Versailles to communicate to the Minstry the new pretentions of the Emperor upon the canal of the Swin, and to folicit their good offices in order to prevent any bad confequences from the fame. The Count de Vergences, in answer to their memorial, told them, that the informations their High Mightinesses had received on the subject of the Autrian Netherlands had not received any orders to attempt any thing contrary to the treaties of Munster and Fontainbleau, or to the friendship fublifting between the Emperor and the Republic.

The above is confirmed by letters from the goroment of Dutch Flanders, who fay that the alarm fpread is without foundation, as the govern-ment of Bruffels is perfectly quiet, and feems not at all to think of the warlike preparations they are accused of.

To Dr Smollet, for preparing a new edition of the Universal History,

In this last transaction, the address of the late Mr Millar was very confpicuous. He had engaged Dr Smollet to abridge the Univerfal History, and paid him in advance, and upon account, upwards of a thousand pounds. The Doctor advanced very flowly in the work, and the bookfeller got very fick of the business; and what not a little increased his uneasiness, was Smoller's informing him, that found his health fo precarious, that a voyage to the continent was necessary to re-establish it, and that he could not go without three or four hundred pounds more being advanced to him; but that beng done, he would take the book with him, and finish it during his residence on the continent. The Doctor's proposal puzzled the wary Scotchman. If he refused the request, perhaps Smollet might die, and the work, not half finished, would be of no value. If he affented to it, Smollet might die. the book was completed, it was a dangerous speculation to print it; and therefore the wifeft was would be to get himfelf out of the fcrape to the belt manner he could. To accomplish this, at the next meeting of the Gentlemen of the Type he attended; and one of the objects of their meetings being to confider about what books were likely to answith the expense of republication, he proposed the Useverfal History in solito, as very likely to be faced ful, being a book of high repute, and out of print tour as it was a heavy book, an abridgement, and new modification, would be necessary. The nature tall answer to this was, who would abridge it print perly? To this Mr Millar unswered, "To thy Smile" let was the only man fiving: "that he had talked to the Doctor about it, and the only objection was the heavy sum he required; for as he was just going abroad, his mind would be free from every interruption, and he could make that book his only business; but then sourceen or sisten hundred pounds was a very heavy sum. The Trade who were present faid, if that was required, the schema must drop, for they would not advance the money. Why, says Andrew, I thought you would not a but I have such an opinion of the work's succeeding, that if you chaste it, I will advance she whole sum, if you will join in the unsertaking to republish it, and we can settle our accounts together at any forture period. This was assented to a and by their fum, if you will join in the undertaking to republife it, and we can fettle our accounts together at any future period. This was affented to; and by their means Mr. Millar got a fecurity for the thouland pounds he had advanced, and the five hundred he was obliged to advance. The Doctor got the movincy he wanted for a tour to the continent, where, with the help of a pair of feiffars, and a little pathe, the abridgment was completed; and the wor/hipful company of beshfellers got a dobe of fifteen hundred and feventy five pounds entailed upon them, for a bridging a book which they dared not be at the expense of printing.

Lord Mansfield enjoys a tolerable state of health, and his spirits are better than for some time. He sees but little company, and those his considertial friends. His life slides easily along,

We have the pleasure to hear that Lord Walsingham, who is to set out for Madrid as soon as the new Spanish Ambassador reaches Paris on his way to London, is to have it in his instructions to mak a proposal to the Spanish ministry. The object of which is to get a renewal of the affients contract for supplying the colonies of Spain in the West Indies, and on the continent of America, with negroes; and to procure a license for a certain num ber of British ships to navigate the Spanish American South-feas, and trade to the ports of his Catholic Majesty in those parts, without being made liable, at prefent, to confifcation, and to have the crews fent to work in the gold and filver mines

Tuesday Mr Faulkener arrived in rown from Lifbon, and confirms the report which we gave of the reception he met with from the minister there, in consequence of which he returned re infecta.

Ar Stetin, Dantzick, Melvin, and Koningsburgh, the last year's confumption of herrings has amounted to upwards of 50,000 lasts; which is an increase of 000 above what has been usually fold at those laces. Thefe herrings were all catched on the poalt of England.—The Dutch have exported to Rusha, in the course of twelve months, about 1400 lasts of herrings, all catched also on the English coast; and in Normandy they have fold 500 to our 100. - Surely the improvement of our own fisheries merits the ferious attention of Parliament. - Before the last most inglorious war, the Scotch sistery employed 28,000 buffes. The Dutch engross almost the whole of this good valuable branch of commerce whole of this most valuable branch of commerce; their exports to Hamburgh, Embden, the Elbe, &c. have not been less than 6000 lasts.

It is now well known in what estimation the East India Company hold Mr Pitt's late Bill for the management of the Raft. In the infancy of this first and daring offspring of the young Minister, the Company were misled by its appearance; but in its growth, and progress to maturity, all the leading features and principles of the parent were found to prevail throughout and discovered themselves gradu-ally to view. Now the eyes of the deluded are o-pened, they are in the most serious alarms for the westare of their territory; and with what reason, may be casily collected from the motion made by a very intelligent Director at the last General Court, the purport of which was nearly as fol-

Mr Jones Adair brought forward the subject of the interference of the Board of Controul in the affairs of the Company in commercial matters, parti-cularly the matter of liquidating the affairs of the Nabob of Arcot's debts; and more particularly, the very fingular case of — Ross, Esq; (who was placed about Lord Cornwallis in America) and who, when he returned from America, was fent to the East Indies in the Company's service, but with an express prohibition not to be advanced to a higher rank than what he had enjoyed in America; and yet when he came to Madras, General Campbell immediately promoted him to a superior rank; which conduct of General Campbell, the Directors very feverely censured in their next dispatches. But this censure Mr Dundas, as leading member of the Board of Controul, struck out: And the Directors thereupon remonstrated with the Board on the right of obedience in their fervants to their own orders. In consequence of which, Mr Dundas consented to let the paragraph remain; but at the same time affirmed, that he would maintain the right of the Board to make any alterations they thought proper. It was this, and other fimilar points of dispute, which occasioned Mr Smith to quit the direction in June last; and to fay at that time, Board of Controul was a fecret fystem of government, dangerous in its principle, and subverfive of the rights of the Company."

Chron. The Directors were called upon to inform the Court what they had done in consequence of the above interference of the Board of Controul?

CBTA Directors answered, that they had made a ion to Mr Pitt, to know if he would support 6 DEC 690 defining the rights of the Company, and afcertaining the right diffraction between these rights and the powers claimed by the Board of Controul; and that Mr Pitt had absolutely resused.

But in contempt of the act of Parliamest, which constituted the Board of Controul, and which fays, that the Board shall not interfere in any of the Company's commercial concerns, it is very positively afferted, that the Board have fent fecret orders, uncommunicated to the Company, to dired particu-larly the invellment at Bombay. Ibid.

These orders are to be the subject of debae at the next General Court; which is to meet in a few days for that special purpose. Ibido m

How fond the present administration are of oper and definite laws, may be feen from their eafy compliance with the remonstrance of the East India Company - a remonstrance warranted by danger, and fanctioned by reason! The complaint of a re-spectable body of men, trembling for their rights, and relifting with proper, and, at the fame time, decent spirit, the invalion of their franchises, is superciliously dismissed, and treated with contempt But this is not to be wondered at, when we confider the conduct of our young statesman, from his first entrance into the political world. Ibid.

Want of precision is one of the greatest defects that can possibly be alledged against the framers of any bills; for, by leaving a part undefined, it gives to the executive power room to judge of, and per-vert the intent. It is belides a great inlet for ablolute power to enter at, which ought on all occa-fions to be guarded against. But in every mean brought forward by this patriotic junto, we may perceive ambiguity and perplexities that tend fufficiently to explain the axioms which support their fystem. Ibid.

It was the principal complaint against Mr Fox's India bill, that it trenched on the charters, and vio lated the rights of the Company. But the complaint, which at that time arose from misapprehension, and was circulated through defign, is now enforced by just causes, and by innovations, which are really and severely selt. The conduct of the Board of Controul, during the last twelve months, has at length awakened the attention of the Directors, and the confequence will be a Parliamentary application for redrefs, at an early period in the course of the next session. Thus the boalled India bill of the minister, which was to be at once final and efficacious, but which has been fince explained and amended, and afterwards in part repeated, with new explana-tions and amendments, is likely to undergo another discussion, not much to the satisfaction of its political parents, whose conduct is deeply involved in the in-veftigation. Ibid.

Mr Haftings's friends begin to be exceeding thy of the minister. Twice has Major Scott been a candidate for the Direction, and both times foiled by the influence of Government; while, on the contrary, every candidate who has been with Opposition has received the support of Government, (Mr El-phinstone, &c.) and succeeded. Mr Hallings's friends fay, this conduct is extremely fingular, (and fo it is) and they begin to hold a kind of language, which differs very little from that of menace; leaving an inference too obvious not to be drawn, viz. that if they meet not with the friendship of the mithemselves powerful enough to give the balance to which ever side they shall incline.—The minister thinks otherwife .- Ibid.

Two thousand troops belonging to the Prince of Hesse are embarked at Portsmouth, to be sent to the East Indies in the service of the Company, to fail with the outward-bound fpring fleet. A discussion of a very interesting nature is expected to take place in the enfuing fession, respecting the debts due to Government by the East India Company. The sums which, by act of Parliament, to have been paid on each embarkation of troops for the Company's service, have never been demanded, and have now accumulated to a very large fum. The deficiencies in the various expectations of the Minister, have at length interfered with his attachment to the Company, and will compel him to demand, that these debts should be put into an immediate train of liquidation. This may certainly have an effect in diminishing the intended imports of the Company; but if fo, the measure will then operate to the national benefit, by diminishing a traffic which is equally injurious to the interests of these kingdoms, and the constitution of their inha-

On Tuesday a grand ball and supper were given by Lord Hampden, at his house in Harley-street, to a very brilliant and felect company, among whom were the Prince of Wales, the Duke and Duchels of Cumberland, the Duke of Quensberry, Prince Rezzonico, and many other foreigners of distinction. Mrs Fitzherbert also graced the dance, which was kept up with great spirit till near three in the morning, when the company fat down to a very elegant repast.

A Providence news-paper, dated September 23, contains the following paragraph: The following account of a truly melancholy scene, which took place at Rawtuxen on Wednefday, last, is transmitted by a gentleman who was prefent. - As a perattempting to discharge a quantity of putrid stagnated water from a cistern, in a distil house, that had been covered for several years, and totally excluded from the external air, the suffocating exhala-tions affected him in such a manner that he fell to the bottom of the ciftern, which contained about nine inches of water in depth. Dr Zeeriel Water-man and Mr Zachariah Rhodes, who were near the place, repaired instantly to rescue the unfortunate man, and by the affiftance of a ladder descended to the bottom of the ciftern; but, alas! they both inflantaneously fainted, and fell profitate on their faces in the water: In the space of a few minutes a number of persons assembled, and used every possible exertion to afford immediate telief; but the circumstances of the air, connected with other difficulties, fore they were brought into the open air, when ever medical affistance was immediately administered. Dr Waterman expired after experiencing the most excruciating agonies; Mr Rhodes and other persons are in a fair way of recovery.

The King of Spain has appointed an American dwarf an officer of his houshold; the creature is but two feet and a half high, but he has brought with him a flave who measures seven feet. The fize of each has proved very fortunate to them; for it is to that the master, like Bebe at the Court of Stanislaus, owes his introduction into the King's anti-chamber: nor has the negro been less successful, he having not only obtained his liberty, but a porter's place in the palace of the Escurial; by a display of extraordinary strength in the presence of the King and Royal Famtly, he lifted from the ground a load of 1150 pounds weight.

The executors of a celebrated chymist, lately deceased, in Paris, were not a little surprised to find, on searching his cabinet, in a glass very carefully secured, a substance resembling a man's brains, with this label, Cerveau de Voltaire. This morfel will be a dear purchase.

His Grace established, contiguous to his palace, a manufacture which will give employment to above five thousand poor persons. A Mr Hussey, an Irish Ecclesiastic, had occasion to wait upon his Grace, ced him to take a view of his thinking that fuch a doveley in Spain must be very striking to a gentleman, whose constant residence in England could not fail to interest him with a full prepoffession for the industry of this country; but behold, when the Archbishop introduced his friend, Mr Hussey, the looms were almost idle; the Bishop not knowing the reason, asked where the people were; the head workmen, who superintended the business, informed him that there was a procession at the shrine of the Blessed Virgin, at which all the people attended. Ah! then, rejoined the Bishop, I shall put an end to these idle excuses; for I think that the Bleffed Virgin will be better pleafed to fee these people attending their business, earning bread for their families, and paying their contracted debts, than losing their time in following her

The consequence was, that the Archbishop iffued a Metropolitican mandate for the future regulation of their conduct in the whole of his Archiefpif-

When the late Lord Paget was on an embassy to Constantinople, his cook was taken ill, and his Lordship was obliged to employ the natives to dress his dinners. Having one Christmas day a large-rty, he desired to have a piece of rooft beef and a plumb pudding. The first was not ormen to procure; but the last, not a servant in his kitchen to be how to make. They applied to him for a receipt; he faid, he thought they must take ten or a dozen eggs, and beat them up together-a certain quantity of good milk, fo much flour, and all those ingredients to be mixed with a large quantity of the bell raisins; then the whole to be boiled about two hours in about four quarts of water. They liftened attentively to his instructions, but when dinner was announced, two fellows appeared, bearing in a most enormous red pan, what they called a plumb pudding. The instant it appeared, Lord Paget exclaimed, Lord forgive me, but I forgot to tell them it was to be put in a bag.

A correspondent fays, as he thinks the French nation exceeds ours in every thing except personal courage, so he shall give an instance of an avaricious Frenchman, who was, he hopes, unique, even among them, and never equalled by any other: -Monf.
Vadille had been in fome small government employ at Boulogne, where he undertook another, gratis, that of milk-tafter general at the market, with which he washed down his bread sufficient for the day; the fame of his riches, however, procured him preferment at Paris, where, to avoid noise, visits, and expence, he lodged in one of the highest garrets in the city, and employed a poor woman at a penny a day to attend him; his constant food was bread and milk, except a little meagre wine on Sunday; and on that day he constantly gave one farthing to the poor, which amounted (as appeared on his books. after his death) to the fum of forty-three shillings and fourpence, in his whole life. In Paris he lent out his money upon undeniable fecurity; but I should have faid, when he went there from Boulogne he determined to make his journey on foot, and put into his pocket, for road expences, fix fous, i. threepence; and in order to make it hold out, he paffed under the drefs and character of a mendicant friar, and no doubt here and there augmented his capital. However, by multiplying his money, from the age of fixteen to seventy-two, he became worth feven or eight hundred thousand livres. He constantly bought his firing (wood) in the summer, and as constantly stole some logs while the woodman was employed in packing up the reft. In his talk illness, he was told he must lose blood; but the furgeon asking half a livre for the operation, he dismissed him, and fent for a barber; he was advised to be bled three times, and to lose at each bleeding about fix ounces; but, in order to fave the treble expense of the barber, he let the eighteen ounces out at once, and thereby loft his life! He left all his fortune to Louis the Fifteenth; but whether the latter erected a statue or a monument to his memory, I cannot fay, fo pray register him in your paper.

Two young officers having a few nights fince had dispute at the Theatre de Beaujolois, in Paris, retired to decide the matter fword in hand into the freet, and in a few minutes both received at one thrust the others fword. One died on the spot, and the other furvived only the next day. What makes this the more diffreshing is, that the quarrel between those rath young men arose on account of a woman of the town.

the the amenda from very respectable anatority ladies bosoms, is a certain elegant foor appendage. The idea is not amifs, and will certainly revive the old fashioned game of bunt the Ripper.

The key which the ladies have lately affumed as an ornament to their bofoms, will never be of any use to those who wish to make way into their hearts: it is of too disproportioned a fize. In the quaint phrase of a lady, speaking of the subject the other day—" it would be using the key of the tea chest to open the freet door."

The frail corps are determined to fport the gold key, notwithstanding all that can be said against it. They go upon the maxim of " shutting the stable door after the fleed is flolen."

Several Ladies of fashion are very much affronted with the filly farcasms in the papers, relative to the gold key, which they think proper to wear. declare that it is only for ornament and not ufe, and that they never wish any better protection for their hearts than a good firm class, as before was the cafe.

The Ladies, by adopting the new fathion for fastening on the handkerchief, furely abuse the intent of Providence, by keeping those charms under key, which were evidenly given them to use.

With all the peculiar caution of the ladies to guard the breaft-work, Love finds a key that will use lock the citadel of the beart.

A jeweller, the other morning, on delivering the fashionable key to a Lady, proposed to add a pretty little elegant lock to it; when her Ladyship, with all the dignity of British freedom, exclaimed, Not for the world, as nothing would hurt her more, than the giving any ground for fuch a feandal, as that English Ladies, like Spanish wives, would submit to be under lock and key.

Anecdote of Alderman Baker .- The Alderman attending, with the rest of his brethren, to present an Address to his Majesty on his accession to the Throne, the Duke of Newcastle, to whom he owed his fortune, infifted upon his receiving the honour of Knighthood. However difagreeable the circum. flance might be to him, there was no fuch thing as refuling it, and he returned home Sir William Baker, Knt. The day following one of his friends wished him joy on the occasion, and expressed a hope that he should soon hear he was a Baronet. That will never be the case, replied the Alderman, for God forbid that any folly of mine should descend to my posterity. Extract of a letter from Bourdeaux, Dec. 10-

" Two American veifels from Virginia have been put under an exempt, and detained in this port for an attempt to snuggle on shore great part of their car-goes. When the French officers went on board, they relisted a long time; and when our people took possession, the behaviour of the Americans was so fingular, that the officers ordered the colours to be torn from the malt, and the French to be hoisted in their stead. An account of this dispute is transmitted to Paris by both paries."

Such were the luxuries of the people of France in thefe frugal times : but the contrast will appear astonishing, when we can aver it as a fact, that Beaujon, the great Farmer General, has one hundred weight of fresh beef put into a macerator every morning, by the intense heat of which the flesh and bones are diffolved to a jelly, which is taken and pressed between iron plates, the juice of which serves for that day's gravy, and the residuum being reduced to a dry caput mortuum, is thrown out unsit for the nourishment of any animal. How many poor would this wanton profusion of luxury rescue from the mifery of hunger.

At Rafay, on the 16th December, and in the 60th year of his age, died John M'Leod, Efq; of This gentleman lived always much effeem-Rafay. This gentleman lived always much encem-al betaved and respected by his numerous friends, relations, and acquainfances, and once junty and a niverfally regretted.

We hear, that the lofs of the Yarmouth veffel, wheat loaded, as mentioned in our paper of last Thursday, was owing to the beacon at the mouth of the harbour of Methill being down. She struck on the rock where it was formerly placed.——Has not the owners or underwriters an action against the shoremaster of that harbour, for neglect of duty?

The Borrowstounness vessel, as mentioned in the saper of last Tuesday being lost in the Baltic, is the

It is with pleafure that we can announce to the Public, that the mail coach betwixt London and Edinburgh not only gives great fatisfaction to travel-lers, but brings in the letters nearly a day fooner than formerly; fo that when the weather and roads become better, we may expect to have Mr Palmer's plan complete.

It is furprizing that, in fuch a fine city as Edic burgh, I mean the new buildings, the inhabitants should be so inattentive to their own interest, as to allow the iron rails before their beautiful houses to waste by rust, for want of new painting them once in two or three years. That trifling expence would be amply repaid the proprietors, and may justly be considered as a faving, as well as an embellishment. If you go any where in England, you will see that matter attended to almost levery season. Many of the making buildings larges are as to be for so the public buildings, lamps, &c. are in the fame fi-tuation, walting by neglect, or parlimony ill judged.

A species of swindling, entirely new in this place, though we believe practifed in the nietropolis of our neighbouring kingdom, was exhibited in this city on A young girl, about ten or e leven years of age, daughter to an indultrious wo man, who keeps a callendar for the fupport, of her felf and family, having been fent by her mother with a backet full of clothes, to be distributed among a variety of cultomers, was accosted near the head of the Flesh-market Close by two women, decent e-nough in their appearance, who begged the favour of her to purchase some pounds of beef-stakes for them, and that they would take care of her basker till she should return. The poor innocent creature, not fulpeding any deceit, and being folicitous of earning a few halfpence, which they promifed her for her trouble, gave the balket to their charge, and received from them what the imagined to be a shilling to make the market. On offering it for change, however, it proved to be a counterfeir, and upon the girl's return, neither women nor balket were to be found. The herfelf thus tricked, may be eafier imagined than de-feribed. She tore her hair, and appeared almost francic; but the unfeeling wretches, who perpetrated this piece of villany, had the address to elude every fearch that was fet on foot in order to have them ap, chended. We hope this will be a caution to the thoughtless and unwary, never to trust their proper

On Wednesday last a man came into a public house in the Saltmarket Glasgow, and called for two gills of whisky, at different times, and while drinking them found means to pick the locks of a cheft of drawers in the room, and took therefrom fifty shillings in filver, and ten shillings in halfpence.

The lost was not perceived till some time after he was gose.—Diligent search was then made after he was gote.—Diffeent learch was then made after this freebouter, and in the course of enquiry at a stabler's in the Gallowgate, suspicion was entertained by the landlord of a man that had put up his horse there the night before y and from the dascription he gave of him, induced the officers to wait his coming home to bed, when he turned out not only to be the person who stole the money above mentioned, but one William Whyte, who formely broke person of Hamilton with other two not yet got. the prison of Hamilton with other two not yet got.

Mr Keeper accordingly came to town along with him to indentify Whyte's person, which he acknowledged, upon seeing him, to be one of the gentlemen amissing; but sinding, up on enquiry, that he had been taken up for a new cause, very fagaciously observed, "that the informer on that account was not instelled to the reward, nor had the insignificates of Hamilton any thing to do with him, he being now committed for a new the wirth high he being now committed for a new theft."—Upon interrogating Whyte how he came by the horfe, he faid he got it from his uncle at Linton, but it is rather supposed he has stolen it.

EPILOGUE. Spoken by W. FECTOR, Efq; At his private Theatre in Dovra, before a nume respectable Audience, on Dec. 14, 1786.

Written by W. GILLUM, Bfg: SPEAK frankly, Ladies, would you have a lover-Such killing proofs of his regard discover! The fire of Olman was at first quite charming; At last, I fear, you thought it too alarming. I faw you fludder at the jealous Turk-When you beheld suspicious bloody work: Wretched, indeed! must be each fair one's fate, Where certain death attends a tete-a-tete : But British husbands are not quite so furious, Tho' apt at times to be a little curious. Yet in high life—the Benedicks of fashion, Like true philosophers, despise all passion. My Lord contented fees the plot go on, And heals his wounded honour-with crim. con. Tho' oftentimes (fo high's the amorous fuel !) It ends most barrid in a modern duel!

Pistols are charg'd—the heroes take their stands; They make apologies—and then flake bands: While newfpapers differfe the flory round, How very cool they were upon the ground.

And not a drop of noble blood is Spilt. Now for poor Zara-the was too fantaftic-Her notions were at best enthusiastic. Should fuch weak feruples be to love a bar?
Alas! the felt, the carried her's too fur! Sir Flimfy fays-" I hate fuch devotees-

On this foundation future fame is built,

"Whose pious orgies—only make one freeze t
"Give me the fair, whom nothing can reftrain"Who looks on all but me with just disdain,

" If I'm indifferent—yet can love the more— And if I'm fickle—the must still adore— " Nay e'en her great affection to express-

" Flatters my wit-my elegance-and dreff" Defends my neckeloth- gainst each idle prater-Who fwears-I've fiele a napkin from a waiter-Will e'en the ufe of my shipp'd fkirts unfold-

Which, like trimm'd game-cocks-makes me lost more bold-" While in return I generoufly floop-

"To paint the beauties of her boweing boop-She gracefully bestows her hishop's blesling."

Fashion's a farce—by men of sense confest—
Fools deck the outside—while the wind's undrest—
Wistom unable to suppress her rage— With from he holds thefe ftrutters on the ftage-The flage of life—where each must play their part — They act the best-who form the rules of art— Here may ber frigid fyllems never fpread— Thy path, O Nature! 'tis our wish to tread! e this indulgence-we prefume to claim-That one falfe flep may never damn our fame.

Chipping Norton, O.B. 9. 1786.

"Efteemed Friend,
THY Cordial is here in eftimation, and has done great good, but one particular case I am induced to relate;
not that I have the gentleman's authority, neither do I suppose he would have his name appear; he has however spoke of it in company, which has greatly enhanced its fale:

"The gentleman alluded to was confined to his bed in the most expressing pain, with the court in his head, the-

the most excruciating pain, with the gout in his head, sto-mach, and limbs, attended by his apothecary, who per-ceiving the case dangerous, thought proper to call to his distance an eminent physician, who pronounced the patient could not live twenty-four hours; of which being made acquainted, he desired his wife, as a foriern hope, to fend to my house for a bottle of Oriental Venetatia Caramar; and trough these gentlemen said it could do him no good, he found essential relief by the first doce, and by seneraing it every third hour. for half a dozen dotes, was good, he found elicitial relief by the first dote, and by repeating it every third hour, for half a dozen dotes, was enabled to walk about his room, and the next day to make his appearance about town. At every attack of this disease fince, he has had recourse to the same remedy, with the same success.

"I can also add, that I have known pregnant women and integrating us the same state."

veget ABLE CORDIAL imparts to the fromach, from its tonic and invigorating qualities, is frongly exemplified by the immediate effects produced in taking it when the fromach is overloaded with food, naufeated with furfeit, or debilitated by intemperance.

To conflictationally weak fromachs it affords a pleasing fensation; it accelerates the process of digestion, corrects crudities, and removes the choice and flatulencies; it diffuses a genial warmth that cherishes the animal spirits, fules a genial warmth that cherines the animal plants and takes away the lilledinels and langour that to greatly embitters the hours of nervous people; and the unering test of experience has confirmed its utility.
